

e-mini Day Trading Futures

<http://www.daytrading-emi-futures.com>

Powered by and similar to MarketVolume.com (a site which offers daily trading volume data on exchange-traded funds), E-mini Day Trading Futures offers real-time market volume data analysis indicators for e-mini futures. The site is geared toward mid-term and short-term traders and uses volume from all major equity cash indexes to indicate volume surges for e-mini futures trading.

The site gives detailed, continuously updated selling and buying volume, along with volume duration for all e-mini products including those based on the S&P 400 and 500, NASDAQ 100, Dow Jones, and Russell 1000 and 2000. Data includes daily high and low index value, the change from the previous day, the day's opening value and current trading volume. You can also view the number of small, medium and large trades for the day.

Volume on all existing contracts is continuously updated to show buying or selling surges so traders can see where to enter and exit the market. Historical volume views also help traders find opportunities. In addition, the site provides monitoring of open interest in comparison to volume; volume of small, medium and large contract trades; and tick volume.

Access to the site costs $159.95 per month. A free two-week trial is available.